To whom it may concern:

My company started operating in the Russian drilling industry in 2008. As with any new market we had to face, and then overcome, various challenges in order to be effective in an unfamiliar environment.

Language was a substantial part of our challenge, and after trying several different interpreters we found Boris Volkovoy. Boris has provided us with translation of many technical documents over the last few years, and has also conducted interpretation in face-to-face meetings. Where as before we often had Russian customers correcting mistakes in technical language provided by previous translators, since Boris started working with us it's no longer a problem.

Boris has committed himself and studied our technology to such a high degree that he has obtained a deep understanding of the subject matter.

Boris completes all work asked of him in a professional and timely manner.

For these reasons and others, I would have no hesitation in recommending Boris as an excellent interpreter. If you would like further information, please contact me directly.

Best Regards,
